

Kim Grant
Blair Brown
June 16, 2007

Blair and I had been dating for almost three years, so it was a wonderful surprise when he popped the big question in March of this year. We decided that we wanted to get married in late spring or early summer, so we immediately went searching for a wedding planner. After doing some research we decided to use Angela Dacus from Southern Event Planners. I explained to her that the most important aspect of the reception to me was the venue. I wanted a place that had lots of character, a beautiful outdoor area, and some part of Memphis history in it. The first place Angela suggested was the Pink Palace. The next day we met with David Branch from the Pink Palace and I knew as I walked into the main lobby that this was exactly what I was looking for.

Over the next three months Angela, David, and I worked together to create the reception of my dreams. As Blair and I pulled up to the reception on the night of the wedding, I was blown away at how amazing everything had turned out. The Pink Palace was all lit up with a beautifully decorated tent on the front lawn. We were escorted around back so that we could make our grand entrance down the main lobby staircase. As we walked into the main lobby everything was absolutely perfect. Garden District lived up to their reputation and had done an amazing job on all of the floral arrangements. The whole night went better than I could have possibly imagined. It was such a blessing to be able to work with such wonderful vendors and coordinators that helped make my fairytale wedding a reality.

Reception The Pink Palace
Planning Southern Event Planners
Photographer Studio J Photography,
Kathy Patterson
Flowers Garden District

Every Princess Deserves A Palace.

The Pink Palace

The Memphis Pink Palace Museum offers convenience and luxurious amenities, beautifully landscaped grounds, marble floors, dramatic staircase, and antique fixtures. Our full time, professional event staff is extremely knowledgeable in all aspects of event planning and is always available to help you plan an event worthy of royalty.

901.320.6320

Photography by Studio J Photography